BARGAINS AT MADISON SQUARE. Many Prince at the A. A. Bonner-Pashio: Stud-Parkville Farm Sale.

The trotting-horse enthusiasts had scarcely time to partake of a hurried dinner after the close of the sale of Mr. Robert Bonner's horses before they were called upon to visit Medison Square Garden, where H. G. Stevens & Co. were to dispose of consignments from Parkville and Fashion Farms and the breeding stud of Mr. A. A. Bonner.

The New York public saw a type of the Kentucky auctioneer for the first time. Capt. Phil Rick of Lexington wielding the gavel. With hat stack jauntily over one ear. Capt. Kidd commanded the attention of the fifteen handred persons present. There appeared to be an absence of buyers with the old-time fever that has marked some of the sales in the metrepolis, and many bargains were to be had for the asking. As a sample of the bidding, it will be only necessary to state that Mr. Bonner's has horse volmer, with a record of 2:24% and a trial of 2:20, failed to elicit a single led, although he is royally bred and a soiter, wearing neither boots nor weights. As the son of Gambetta and Ulster Queen was being led away somebody in the crowd plucked up courage and shouted a hid of $1,000. Mr. Bonner was asked during the evening to put a wrise on volmer, and that gentleman placed to favore at $5,000. Mr. Henry N. Smith of Fashion Stud. A PLIMMER AND HOGAN DRAW.

Filmmer Was the Better General, but He-gas Was Game. It was a pretty good go that took place in the Clermont avenue rink in Brooklyn last night between Bill Plimmer, the 110-pound champion of England, and "Kid" Hogan of Brooklyn, who made his professional debut o work done by the fighters-it was remarkably good in the way that the spectators behaved good in the way that the spectators behaved themselves.

Calling this bout a pretty good one is the only right thing to do, because the boys fought well from start to finish. Plimmer was sure that if he were beaten by a man who had just come out of the amateur ranks he would be called a no good. Hogan, on the other hand, felt that if he only beat the recognized champion of England, in the class, he would be away on top. Hogan could have taken a defeat and still been in line for a good many good ones, at the weight. But Hogan was not willing to take a defeat. He wanted a win. The Plimmer people were so confident that they would get the win that they said nothing.

When the men appeared in the ring Jack
McAuliffe, "Gimpy" Smith, the trainer of the National A. C., and Fred Bird came up to handle Hogan. Charley Norton, Bil-ly Johnson, and Benny Murphy did the same for Plimmer. Warren Lewis had agreed to act as referee, and Bob Stoll and Johnny Eckhardt held the watches. Hogan was by far the favorite with the house. As soon as his name was mentioned there was a cheer that ratiled the rafters.

The Englishman only got a little bit of applause. Flinmer looked fine as he sat in his chair, but Hogan was thin, and that is saying a good deal, for "the Kid" never has any too much fat on him.

When Ed Harvey, the master of ceremonies, announced that the go was to be of six rounds, there was a general howl, for the understanding was that it was to be of ten. Afterward Harvey said that the partias had agreed to an eight-round go. The truth is that Jack McAuliffe, who had probably got on to Hogan's form, called for the six rounds, believing that the Brooklyn boy would never last ten against the experience of the Englishman. A proposition for eight rounds came up and the Plimmer side agreed.

The fight itself was an excellent exhibition. Johnny Eckhardt held the watches. Hogan ence of the Englishman. A proposition for eight rounds came up and the Plimmer side agreed.

The fight itself was an excellent exhibition, but a good many witnesses were more than dissatisfied with the decision.

While Hogan did almost all the leading, on Jack McAulifie's advice, after the first round, he had to take a large majority of the punishment, and was made groggy more than once during the fight. Hogan swung wild three times out of five.

Plimmer waited for his man and met him, with a few exceptions, on the face in a way that proved to the spectators that the Englishman was one of experience in ring tactics. Plimmer also landed some stiff punches on the ribs. In the first round Plimmer scored a clean knock down by a left-hander on Hogan's breast. Hogan was up in a second and made a rush, but he was met by a left in the face that sent him away again.

Plimmer outgenerailed Hogan from the start, and there is no reason why he shouldn't, but Hogan made a great show for a man so inexperienced. The gameness of the Brooklyn boy could never be doubted. He took punches on the eye and a fearful smasher on the ribs that would have disconcerted most men, but he stayed. If Hogan had been able to land all his swings he would doubtless have been the winner, but he was wid in his delivery, and Plummer was just clever enough to keep away.

been the winner, but he was wind in his delivery, and Plummer was just clover enough to keep away.

The Englishman showed a good left hand in jabbing Hogan's face, but he only let his right go half a dozen times. In each of these efforts he landed.

The cleverness of Plimmer in getting away and his coolness in the ring were admirable. At the finish he had no mark that was severe, while Hogan had a red left eye and his mouth and nose were puffed up.

Plimmer's friends were sure that their man would get the decision, and when it came to a draw Plimmer pulled off his gloves in hot temper. "It's a shame," he cried to Charley Norton: "I had the best of him all the way through."

The crowd was delighted when Warren Lowis made it a draw. Some persons had the aight that if Hogan stayed the eight rounds it was equal to a victory, and they went home with that idea.

In truth, it must be said that Plimmer had played a waiting game, and was without a mark at the and, while Hogan was thorough.

CAMBRIDGE Jan. 12.-The Harvard Crimson, in its next issue, will say: "A great scheme is being planned in England which promises to be of great interest to America and especially be of great interest to America and especially to Harvard. It is proposed that every four years there should be held in London an 'English festival,' which should consist of contests in track events, cricket, and rowing. These contests were at first to be open merely to the English colonists, but it is now proposed to admit America. The action is taken in view of the splendid showing that our athletes made abroad last summer, and also of our games against Lord Hawko's team of cricketers.

The only opposition was by W. R. Bassett, who ran against H. B. Turner. It developed as the balleting proceeded that Turner and Bassett supporters were cutting the other candidates for devernor, with the probability of both being elected. Massey was said to be the chief sufferer.

The Olympic Club's Agent Will Make a Match if Money Talks.

Capt. Frank Williams, the representative of the Olympic Club of New Orleans, opened business yesterday. "Briefly," said the Captain, "the Olympic Club will give these purses: $10,000 for Corbett and Fits-simmons, $8,000 for Corbett and Maher, $7,500 for Fits-simmons, and Maher, $12,000 for Corbett and Slavin, and $12,000 for Corbett and Mitchell.

"I would like to say, however," the Captain continued, "that, in my opinion there is no use a nofering anything to Mitchell and Slavin, for they won't fight. I had tains with them in Chicago, and draw my conclusions from those talks. They had engagements that lasted through ten weeks, and intended to profit by them all they could. Mitchell talked about 'London P. R. rules only,' and Slavin 'would do nothing that would prevent a match with John L. Sullivan,' &c. Our offers stand, just he same. We want the best men, and I think the money offered is generous. If the men won't fight, why we can't make them."

Toward ovening a telegram came to the Mastrated News from Bob Fitzsimmons, who said he would not fight Maher, but that he would meet Corbett.

Billy Madden, Maher's manager, was notified of Capt, Williams's offers, and he replied that he was satisfied to go ahead with either match that the Olympic Club wanted first.
